It gives me great pleasure to introduce this revised Access Guide to Lochaber. As someone who has difficulty accessing certain places and buildings, I know how important it is for people to be aware of likely problems that they may encounter so that they can be confident of overcoming them if that is possible and if it is not, to make alternative arrangements.

We all know the attractions of Lochaber with its unsurpassed scenery and wonderful highland hospitality. It is a place where visitors can find peace of mind and where a huge variety of attractions are available. Whilst most people who come to Lochaber are hale and hearty, it is important not to forget that those who have a disability should also be able to enjoy as many of those attractions as possible.

After the success of the first guide this new updated and enlarged version provides additional information to assist disabled people living in Lochaber and others to plan and enjoy a visit to Lochaber. It is very encouraging to see how many places are currently accessible to wheelchair users and I am sure that more will follow. The publication of this Guide will mean that Lochaber will be seen not only as a beautiful place for a holiday but also as one that cares for those who are less fortunate than others.
